Executive Summary

Simply put, the application is a social media site (almost a clone of Instagram) primarily for gamers. It allows both popular and unpopular gamers to post images and videos to their feed after signing up. Their posts can be posted publicly or privately to their followers. This app is meant to create a gamer-only environment for them to post their content and connect themselves with other gamers on the platform, instead of using applications where there is a divergent audience like Facebook, Instagram, etc.

Sure, there are apps that let gamers text and call each other (Discord), live stream to their audience (Twitch), and see each other’s stats (Op.gg). However, there is currently no popular app that connects gamers in this way. This is why Gamedia fulfills a want in the market.

User-types

the different users that exist in the system

1. Verified content-creators: to distinguish popular players from fake accounts
2. Content-creators: have the same privileges as verified content-creators
3. Public viewers (guests): users who do not necessarily have an account but would like to view the public feed
